War as an Anthropological and Historical Phenomenon in the Era of Globalisation

International academic conference on the occasion of the 70th anniversary of the end of World War II

Date:

September 24 – 25, 2015

Place:

Hotel Park Avenue Piešťany/

Faculty of Arts, Comenius University in Bratislava

Aim of the conference:

The main aim of the conference is to continue a tradition of annual academic conferences, started by Danubius University, and to provide scholars with an opportunity to exchange scholarly knowledge and both theoretical and practical experience, to identify and analyse current political, legal and social issues in the fields of international relations and existing or threatening war conflicts, to propose possible solutions and prognose the scenarios of future developments.

Topics:

- The end of World War II in the historical context;
- War as an extreme way of interaction in the international relations;
- World globalisation;
- International relations in contemporary world (myths and reality);
- Politics and policies (international politics, geopolitics, state policies, regional policies) and the ways they address international relations;
- Legal aspects and legislation in international relations;
- Migration processes and their impact upon international crises;

The objective of conference is to bring together scholars and PhD candidates with various disciplinary approaches, especially from the fields of humanities, social sciences, political sciences and legal studies.

The conference is interdisciplinary and it focuses on the current aspects of international relations, including economic globalisation, economic crisis and other structural tensions and their possible solutions.

Against this backdrop, we are looking for contributions which draw on law, history, philosophy, social policies, political science, theory of international relations, European studies, sociology, ethics, economy and other social sciences and humanities.
